

High Cross Church is a friendly, inclusive ecumenical church in the centre of Camberley, formed through the union of the Methodist and United Reformed Churches. The two congregations began worshipping together in 1989 and moved into the current Knoll Road building in 1990, with flexible spaces used for worship and a wide range of church and community activities.

At the heart of High Cross is a desire to be “a church at the heart of the community” — a welcoming place where people can explore faith at their own pace, grow in discipleship, and serve others in practical ways. The church family gathers for regular worship and places strong emphasis on being present and useful in local life, with a warm, open-door approach to community connection.

High Cross also supports charities that reflect this commitment to compassion and long-term change — including Children of the Dump, a UK-registered charity working with children and families living in extreme poverty on and around the Payatas and San Isidro rubbish-dump communities in Manila, Philippines. High Cross highlights the charity’s focus on education, family support, and loving care, helping to support around 300 children, and the long-standing impact of the work since 1975, alongside its Filipino partner organisation (ASCF), giving young people the chance to escape the cycle of poverty through education.
